Councillors mull flip-flop on condo cash

$10K. Plan would see loans for those who buy condos in Exchange District

Second thoughts

"As noble as this idea was, it's really not fair to taxpayers across the city who don't get this subsidy."

Coun. Jeff Browaty, on a proposed $10,000 incentive for Exchange District condo buyers.

BERNICE PONTANILLA
bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

Two city councillors say they've changed their minds about a $10,000 cash incentive approved at council last week for condominium buyers in the east Exchange District.

Coun. Jeff Browaty said there is still time to reverse the decision on the incentive, which was approved on July 17.

"As noble as this idea was, it's really not fair to taxpayers across the city who don't get this subsidy," he said.

The incentive, which is part of the Exchange Waterfront Neighbourhood Development Program and has a maximum payout of $7.785 million, was heralded as a way to boost the number of downtown residents. The plan is to provide a $10,000 loan that is forgiven at $2,000 per year for five years.

Browaty said the plan still requires a bylaw that would come forward through either the downtown development or executive policy committee. "There's definitely a way to nip this in the bud before the money flows," he said.

Coun. Scott Fielding agreed, saying he's also reconsidering.

However, another councillor, Paula Havixbeck, said she has spoken to officials of the downtown business-development group CentreVenture and developer Streetside and there is a need for such an incentive.

"I'm not saying scrap what we have, but take another look at it," she said, adding that she's proposed limiting the loans to 50 condos for a total investment of $500,000.

Havixbeck said the bylaw Browaty referred to will likely be debated sometime in October, giving "some time to stop and say, 'What can we reasonably do here?'"

Provincial politics

Manitoba's 'fiscal cliff' a myth: Pallister

The leader of the provincial PCs is accusing the NDP of using scare tactics to frighten Manitobans into believing his party is forcing the province off a "fiscal cliff", and denied the Tories will block an interim supply bill needed to pay for core services.

"We have never said that we'd do anything but support an interim supply measure," said Brian Pallister at a PC press conference held at the Legislative Building Monday. "I'm here to dispel the myth that the NDP are trying to perpetrate on the people of this province that they should be scared unless the NDP gets its way."

The NDP's house leader Jennifer Howard told Metro last week funding for all government services will dry up by the end of July unless the Tories stop stalling an interim supply bill, designed to keep the province afloat while the two parties battle it out in the house over the provincial budget bill, and the one per cent PST hike it includes.

"To punish all Manitobans because you're trying to score some political point is wholly irresponsible," said Howard Thursday.

Pallister said he and his party have been clear from the start that they're trying to hold up the budget bill — to bring attention to what they consider an illegal move to bypass a referendum before the tax hike — but have never said they'd stop the interim measure.

Lightning crashes. Firefighter zapped by downed power lines

The head of the United Fire Fighters of Winnipeg says a city firefighter is lucky to be alive after being zapped by downed power lines during one of nearly a hundred calls crews were called to during the electrical storm that rolled over Winnipeg Sunday evening.

Alex Forrest said firefighters were responding to one of five fires caused by lightning strikes during the storm at a house at 608 Sherburn St. when crews came across downed power lines arcing in the street.

- The storm meant a busy night for Winnipeg firefighters, with the service receiving around 60 fire rescue calls and over 30 medical emergency calls over a three-and-a-half hour period Sunday night.

Nomination. Lawyer to be first to officially join Liberal leadership race

A Winnipeg lawyer with roots in Anola, Man., will be the first official candidate to run for leadership of the Manitoba Liberal Party.

Rana Bokhari, 35, announced on Monday her intention to submit her nomination papers Tuesday morning.

Bokhari told Metro Winnipeg she hopes to be able to convince Manitobans she's the right choice for the party leadership.

"I'm hoping that people do not want just another seasoned politician," said Bokhari. "I want to have real conversations, with real people ... conversations about building Manitoba."

Phoenix Sinclair. Woman tells inquiry that child's horrific death must not be in vain

The woman who was called "nana-mom" by a Manitoba girl bounced in and out of foster care before she was murdered says the five-year-old's death cannot be in vain.

Kim Edwards, who looked after Phoenix Sinclair during part of her short life, told an inquiry that the child's legacy must be one of hope and renewal.

All children in Manitoba are entitled to protection, but the same privilege shouldn't be given to the social workers who failed Phoenix, Edwards said in her final submission Monday.

"The time for excuses must end with your report," an emotional Edwards told Commissioner Ted Hughes.

"Our Phoenix will create a safer and better life for many other vulnerable children in Manitoba. Her legacy will renew the child-welfare system. All children must be equal under the law."

Final submissions are scheduled to wrap up next week and a report is expected by December. The inquiry, which began last year, has heard from 126 witnesses and is estimated to be one of the most expensive inquiries in Manitoba's history.

Phoenix was killed by her mother, Samantha Kematch, and her stepfather, Karl McKay, after repeated and horrific abuse. Both were convicted of first-degree murder in 2008.

The commission's mandate is to determine the circumstances surrounding Phoenix's death and to make recommendations for improving child welfare in Manitoba.

Detroit in bankruptcy

Judge to hear from fretful pensioners

The federal judge overseeing Detroit's bankruptcy will hear arguments Wednesday on the city's request to freeze lawsuits by retirees who claim their pensions are protected by the state constitution.

An Ingham County judge last week ordered emergency manager Kevyn Orr and Gov. Rick Snyder to not take any more action in the case. Judge Rosemarie Aquilina also barred any moves that would hurt pension benefits already being received.

But city attorneys said federal law typically carries an "automatic stay" to give a debtor such as Detroit a "breathing spell" to protect assets and restructure debts.

A strong earthquake that shook an arid, hilly farming area in northwest China sparked landslides and destroyed or damaged thousands of brick-and-mud homes on Monday, killing at least 75 people and injuring more than 400, the government said.

The quake near the city of Dingxi in Gansu province toppled walls and telephone lines, shattered houses and sent cascades of dirt and rock down hillsides, blocking roads and slowing rescue efforts by crews trying to reach remote areas.

Hospitals set up aid stations in parking lots to accommodate large numbers of injured, while hundreds of paramilitary People's Armed Police fanned out to search for victims in the farming region where the quake struck.

"I saw the bulb hanging from the ceiling start swinging wildly around. I woke my two friends and we ran into the bathroom to hide," said arts student Li Jingui, 21, who was on the fourth floor of a school dormitory in Dingxi.

Damage was worst in Min county in Dingxi's rural southern portion, where scores of homes were damaged, Dingxi Mayor Tang Xiaoming told state broadcaster CCTV. All but three of the deaths, all 14 missing and most of the injured were in Min, a likely result of shoddy construction.

Almost 2,000 homes were either destroyed or heavily damaged, with thousands more suffering partial damage, according to the Dingxi government website.

Residents said the shaking lasted about a minute, but wasn't strong enough to cause major damage in urban areas, where buildings are more solidly built.

Six Flags Entertainment Corp. is using "both internal and external experts" to investigate the roller-coaster accident that killed a woman at its Dallas-area amusement park, company president Jim Reid-Anderson said Monday.

Rosa Ayala-Goana was killed when she fell Friday from the Texas Giant roller coaster at Six Flags Over Texas in Arlington, a western suburb of Dallas. Witnesses told authorities that Ayala-Goana expressed concern moments before the 14-storey ride began that the safety bar had not completely engaged.

The Tarrant County medical examiner's office confirmed Monday that the 52-year-old Dallas resident was the victim in the accident, and that she suffered "multiple traumatic injuries" during the fall.

Bittersweet. Norwegian woman who made rape claim pardoned by Dubai

With her passport back in hand, a Norwegian woman at the centre of a Dubai rape claim dispute said Monday that officials dropped her 16-month sentence for having sex outside marriage in the latest clash between the city's Islamic-based legal codes and its international branding as a Western-friendly haven.

Dubai authorities hope the pardon of the 24-year-old woman will allow them to sidestep another potentially embarrassing blow to the city's heavily promoted image as a forward-looking model of luxury, excess and cross-cultural understanding.

"I am very, very happy," Marte Deborah Dalelv told The Associated Press after she was cleared by the order of Dubai's ruler. "I am overjoyed."

But the case points to wider issues embedded in the rapid rise of Gulf centres such as Dubai and Qatar's capital of Doha, host of the 2022 World Cup. These cities' cosmopolitan ambitions are often at odds with the tug of traditional views on sex and alcohol.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Culture clash

Both alcohol consumption without a proper licence and sex outside marriage are outlawed, but the rules are difficult to enforce and generally only become an issue if authorities are alerted.

- Most foreign residents and visitors coast through Dubai's tolerant lifestyle. Women in full Islamic coverings shop alongside others in miniskirts, and liquor flows at resorts and restaurants.
- Yet once authorities determine a legal line has been crossed, it's often difficult for the suspects.
- Nowhere in the region are the two sides more in potential conflict than in Dubai, where the expatriate workforce outnumbers locals 5-to-1.

Canadians greeted their likely future king with a flurry of congratulations on Monday, but the long-awaited announcement of the prince's birth didn't seem to spark the same frenzy that surrounded his parents' wedding.

The country's political leaders were quick to send good wishes, with many issuing statements shortly after Clarence House officially announced that the Duchess of Cambridge had delivered a son.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper hailed the arrival of "a future sovereign of Canada," calling it a "highly anticipated moment for Canadians given the special and warm relationship that we share with our Royal Family."

Gov.-Gen. David Johnston also congratulated Prince William and his wife Kate, saying that as a father of five, he knows well "the elation that a new arrival brings to a young family."

Even those opposed to the monarchy welcomed the prince's arrival.

Tom Freda, director of the organization Citizens for a Canadian Republic, said any news involving the Royal Family renews the debate over the relevance of a monarchist system, "and debate is good."

Several national landmarks — including the CN Tower, Niagara Falls and Parliament's centre block — were set to shine blue Monday night in honour of the newborn prince.

Anticipation surrounding the royal baby had been building in recent days, but even royal-watchers recognized it hasn't rivalled the near-obsessive excitement that ushered in the royal wedding two years ago.

Are video-game players athletes? The U.S. government thinks so.

In what's being touted as a victory for competitive gaming, electronic sport players are now eligible for athlete visas allowing them to work, travel and reside in America for up to five years. The visas are the same as those given to foreign athletes in other major sports leagues, like the NBA and NHL.

The change comes at a time when e-sports in North America are transitioning from small-time hobby to big-time business.

"The ecosystem is growing by leaps and bounds," said Dustin Beck, vice president of e-sports at Riot Games. "We're seeing an average of nearly four million fans tuning in weekly for our European and North American broadcasts and we hit 18 million unique views for our all-star finals back in May."

Nothing's free. More unpaid interns in Canada suing for back wages

Unpaid interns agree to work free in exchange for training and job prospects, but a growing number of them say employers aren't living up to their side of the bargain.

In recent months, former interns in the U.S. have won several high-profile lawsuits for back wages, spurring a growing backlash here in Canada.

Jainna Patel, 24, a math and statistics graduate from McMaster University, filed a federal labour complaint against Bell Mobility after spending five weeks in its Professional Management Program (PMP) in Mississauga, Ont.

In response, Human Resources Development Canada sent a letter to Bell, requesting it either pay Patel's back wages or contest the complaint she filed. The company had until July 9th to file its response.

A Bell spokesperson told Torstar News Service that their program is not only legal, but one of the best internships in the country.

In the year since Patel first filed her complaint she hasn't heard from Bell, but remains hopeful because interns across North America have been winning cases like hers.

Last month, two unpaid interns working on the Oscar-winning film Black Swan successfully sued Fox Searchlight pictures. A New York district judge ordered the film production company to pay back wages because the interns did the same work as regular employees, provided value to the company and performed low-level tasks that didn't require any specialized training. Fox is appealing the ruling.

Shortly after the decision, interns at the website Gawker also filed a suit for unpaid wages.

Here in Canada, interns are also starting to file complaints.

In 2012, Kyle Iannuzzi was awarded almost $1,000 in back wages from Platinum Events Group in what he believes was the first successful complaint against a company for an unpaid internship in Ontario.

Home insurance. Rates could rise as Canada hit by 'unprecedented' weather

Canadians could be paying more for home insurance as the toll of severe weather on personal property continues to climb, one of the country's largest insurance companies said Monday.

Intact Financial Corp. said it expects to book about $257 million in expenses stemming from the flooding in Alberta and Toronto and the deadly Lac-Mégantic train derailment in Quebec.

"The devastation brought on by recent flooding and torrential rain is unprecedented," Intact chief executive Charles Brindamour said in a statement.

"The scope of the damage and destruction ... is a stark reminder that we must adapt the protection offered to Canadians to ensure it remains sustainable in light of the greater prevalence and severity of weather events." THE CANADIAN PRESS

WHAT ARE YOU STARING AT?

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

My friend and I have a code word that we use whenever we catch each other staring at someone for a prolonged period of time. It's a subtle way to notify one another that it's time to look away. This is more of a one-sided initiative, however, as I never let my gaze linger for more than a couple of seconds while she has a tendency to stare excessively.

She insists that she doesn't realize she's doing it — hence the need for a secret phrase to covertly remind her to stop being creepy — and she's certainly not the only person out there with a habitual staring problem.

As a daily public transit user, I know all about uncomfortable eye contact with strangers. It can be difficult to know where to look in a packed train or bus, which is why most of us use props — books, cellphones, perhaps even this very newspaper — in an effort to avoid gazing at fellow passengers.

Social norms dictate that non-stop staring should be avoided, and yet some people just can't help themselves. Whenever I catch someone looking at me I immediately feel two things: embarrassed (because I fear a stray piece of spinach must have wedged itself in between my teeth) and kind of irritated.

Staring, even if it is harmless or unintentional, has the tendency to make others feel self-conscious and objectified. Nobody wants to be eyed up and down by a stranger, but what is the appropriate response to this sort of behaviour? I've never had the audacity to react with, "Take a picture, it'll last longer," but I have thrown out a passive aggressive "Can I help you?" on a couple of occasions.

Then again, maybe this notion that everybody is constantly looking at each other is all in our heads.

Earlier this year, researchers at the University of Sydney published a study on the topic of gaze perception and discovered that humans have a tendency to presume other people are staring at them, even when they aren't. And no it's not because we're a bunch of paranoid narcissists — this expectancy is actually a defence mechanism.

In primates, a lengthy direct gaze is a sign of aggression. Researchers theorize that this hostile interpretation could explain why humans are hard-wired to assume that they are being looked at in order to anticipate potential threats. It might also explain why we have an innate ability to "feel" as though someone is watching us even if we can't see them directly.

So remember, if you do come across someone worth gawking at, there's a strong chance that they are going to know about it.

RE: Banning Chris Brown In Halifax: Would We Be Moral White Knights, Or Just Hypocrites? It's Complicated... published July 22

Last time I checked if you were a convicted criminal you were not welcome in Canada?

Plus, I don't think this punk has learned anything from beating his girlfriend at all, to listen to him he is the victim not her. Stay home Brown and join an anger management group.

mtwt posted to metronews.ca

Rodney Atkins, Axl Rose and Tommy Lee ... what do all three men have in common with Chris Brown? First off, I would like to say all three men have performed in Halifax, N.S.

Which is great for their fans, but if we were to compare them with Chris Brown: there is not much difference.

Rodney Atkins allegedly attempted to suffocate his wife with a pillow. Axl Rose has been accused of assault and sexual battery. Tommy Lee kicked Pamela Anderson while she was holding their son Dylan. He also beat a photographer at one point.

Before anyone judges Chris Brown, and thinks he shouldn't come, they should do their research on the others who have come here.

Trance

Director. Danny Boyle

Stars. James McAvoy, Vincent Cassel, Rosario Dawson

Genre-hopping British filmmaker Danny Boyle describes this serpentine psycho-thriller as personal therapy, a stress reliever he made while also directing last summer's Olympics opening ceremony. The stop-and-start nature of the production may account for the film's patchwork vibe. More difficult is the lack of feeling it summons for the three principal characters, played by James McAvoy, Rosario Dawson and Vincent Cassel. Trance begins as a heist picture, one in which Goya's fearsome masterpiece Witches in the Air sells for a cool $42 million in London, before vanishing under the watch of auction official Simon (McAvoy). Then the confusion really starts, as a hypnotherapist Elizabeth (Dawson) and crook (Cassel) get involved. The problem with Trance is that Boyle and his writers want to mess with more than just Simon's brain. The story becomes twisted and unreliable to the point of being downright silly, as motivations shift and finding the missing Goya starts to seem like the furthest thing from everybody's mind.

A mother's love for her child takes on brutal new meaning in this film by Kim Ki-duk, one that's as hard to watch as it is to forget. It boldly brings together the two sides of the South Korean auteur: the penchant for sadism from such earlier works as Bad Guy and The Isle, and the spiritual reflections of his master stroke, Spring, Summer, Fall, Winter ... and Spring. Themes of vengeance vs. forgiveness bleed into each other as the story becomes a meditation on life's meaning.

Harris isn't afraid to carve her own path

Hatchet 3. Horror heroine bucks Hollywood convention and is content with "just being me"

CHRIS ALEXANDER
scene@metronews.ca

Danielle Harris is really a machine disguised as a woman.

The whirling dervish of an actor began her professional journey as a child star in the '80s, starring in the back-to-back horror sequels Halloween 4 and 5 as a little girl running afoul of masked killer The Shape.

Thankfully she stepped away, grew up, and re-emerged as an intelligent, unaffected and level-headed blend of performer and savvy businesswoman and is now a major star in the horror underground and one of the most prolific people alive, averaging at least five pictures per annum and appearing at countless fan conventions.

Among her many credits this year — including Among Friends, her directorial debut — is the Adam Green-produced slice and dicer Hatchet 3, opening on Wednesday as part of the Raven Banner/Cineplex theatrical horror series Sinister Cinema.

From Halloween to Hatchet, Danielle Harris has horror covered. HANDOUT

In it Harris plays Marybeth, a tough heroine who crosses paths with deformed killer Victor Crowley (Kane Hodder). It's a role she took over from the first film's Tamara Feldman, but as she explains, she had no trouble making the character her own.

"When I was cast as Marybeth in Hatchet 2, I wasn't worried at all," Harris says.

"In the first film she was weaker but I had the chance to make her more assertive and more of an adversary to Victor. And really, I have a 'get out of jail free card' with the fans. They seem to embrace me in whatever film I'm in, so there was no pressure at all."

Harris is right; she is most certainly a fan favourite — a beautiful, talented and tenacious artist whose frantic schedule would crush a lesser person. And yet she seems to find balance and is still having a blast navigating Hollywood and carving her own niche.

"I don't have an agent. I don't need one anymore. And I don't need to audition anymore. I can't stand auditioning. By now, people know who I am and what I can do. And although people do recognize me now, I have no desire to ever be on the cover of Us Weekly or be pushed into that world. I'm happy doing my work, acting and directing and running around in my baseball hat, just being me."

If you go...

Hatchet 3 will screen at Cineplex theatres across Canada on Wednesday.

Selena Gomez ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Single Selena learned lessons of love in the limelight

Selena Gomez, who turned 21 Monday, confirms in an interview with Ryan Seacrest for an E! special that she and Justin Bieber are not together — at the moment — but that the in-the-spotlight relationship taught her a number of things. "I learned a lot. I learned that I should definitely keep it way more private next time," she says, adding that "honesty" is the main thing she looks for in a man. "Egos turn me off, big time. I mean, it's hard to just date in this industry, it really is, because it doesn't have to be anything serious, it can just be something fun — and it should be because I'm young — but you can't really help the people that you meet or that you fall in love with or that you want to date."

Kanye West

Does whiny West deserve a Swift kick in the pants?

It looks like Kanye West's infamous interruption of Taylor Swift during the 2009 MTV Video Music Awards is going to continue to haunt him — especially with the surfacing of a recording secretly made while West ranted during a post-show dinner, according to Gawker. "I'm pushing the envelope! I wrote my f—ing Run This Town verse for a f—ing month! When I heard Eminem's verse on the Drake s—, I went back and rewrote my s— for two days. I cancelled appointments to rewrite! I f—ing care," West reportedly gripes on the recording. "Because I did that, Taylor Swift cannot win over Beyoncé! Because I wrote my verse in two days, Taylor Swift cannot beat Beyoncé. As long as I'm alive! And if I'm alive, kill me then! Kill me then! As long as I'm alive, you gon' have to deal with it. Hungry, hungry Harry: Disappearing Daniel worries weight-watching fans

THE WORD

Daniel Radcliffe's recent gaunt, exhausted appearance has fans worried, but his rep insists it's all work-related, telling Yahoo's omg! that Radcliffe's current stint in The Cripple of Inishmaan on stage in London "is a very demanding role, physically."

But the toll the show, and the summer weather, have been taking on the Harry Potter star haven't stopped him from tending to his fans.

"At every night's performance there is a large crowd at the stage door, and he takes the time to sign autographs and pose for pictures at length," his rep adds, "regardless of the extreme London heat wave."

You know, if this were any other star, I'd say something like: "The heat wave here isn't getting me into a size six, what is going on with Daniel (cough, drugs, cough)?" But it's Daniel Radcliffe! No way! He's just going to look sickly and we will accept the reason his publicist gives us.

And this, my friends, has never happened before in this column. Is the birth of the Royal Baby making me mushy toward all things British?

Kelly Rowland

Row, row, Rowland your boat, not so gently down the stream

Kelly Rowland's fun day-trip whale-watching off the coast of Provincetown, Mass., turned into quite the ordeal when the singer and her party ended up lost at sea for 12 hours before being rescued by the Coast Guard, according to CBS News. The captain of the private vessel reportedly became "disoriented in the five-to-six-foot waves and fog that had rolled in," a source says. The boat was located by the Coast Guard and was being escorted back when it broke down and had to be towed the remaining four miles to shore. An employee of the towboat company says the passengers were "tired and thankful" and "just wanted to get off the boat."

"I spoke to Tish and she told me they both woke up and realized they love each other and decided they want to stay together," the source says. "They went into (couples) therapy with the goal of divorcing in a way that was healthy for the children but ended up coming out of it with the realization that they in fact want to stay together. Tish sounds happy and energized about having this fresh start."

Best Health Magazine

In the Summer issue of Best Health we feature an article by one of our columnists, registered dietitian Sue Mah. She talks about the importance of getting enough fluids, especially in the hot summer months when we sweat more. But, as we talked about last week, not all drinks are created equal.

Healthy choices
In addition to water, coconut water and vitamin-enhanced waters, here are some other options:

Lower-fat milk
It has lots of essential nutrients. One cup of one per cent milk has calcium, vitamin D, magnesium and phosphorus.

Vegetable juice
These typically have one full serving of veggies, and fewer calories than fruit juice.

Not-so-healthy choices
Here is one you might want to limit:

Sports drinks
A bottle of a sports drink like Gatorade contains 150 calories and 35 grams of sugar. It also has 270 mg of sodium. Try one of the calorie-reduced versions.

The bitter truth about sweeteners

Debate. Have a sweet tooth but don't know what's best (or worse): fake sugar or real? Here's the lowdown on the popular sweeteners

life@metronews.ca

Get to know what you're putting in your body. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Want to know what sweeteners are good for you? Metro breaks down the benefits and drawbacks of the most common kinds.

Sugar

Natural, yes, but "added sugars" (which also include simple sugars like honey and brown sugar) was recently put on the American Heart Association's (AHA) black list of items that were detrimental to heart health.

"The best rule of thumb is to start with an unsweetened food and add just a touch of sweetener yourself," nutritionist Dr. Janet Brill explains. "For example, try unsweetened iced tea or plain, non-fat yogurt and add in a touch of your sweetener of choice."

Aspartame

One way to avoid added sugars is to use an artificial sweetener. Aspartame is made up of methanol, phenylalanine and aspartic acid, and is 200 times sweeter than sugar, says Brill. Brand names of the product include Nutrasweet and Equal. As an added bonus, it is calorie-free.

While the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the European Food Safety Authority have said it is safe for human consumption, some research has cast doubt on its long-term safety.

Malitol and sorbitol

These artificial sweeteners are sugar alcohols. They are not completely absorbed in the body, which means that the body takes in less calories than when you consume regular sugar, Brill explains.

However, they can cause several gastrointestinal side effects.

"Most 'sugar free' or 'diet' foods are made with one of these sweeteners, which is exactly why when you eat those foods you are more gassy and bloated," says celebrity nutritionist Mark Macdonald, author of New York Times-best-seller Body Confidence.

"Your body cannot metabolize fake sugars. There has been many other health and digestive challenges reported with these fake sugars, so you are always better to use the healthy sweeteners to sweeten up your food."

Agave nectar

Agave nectar is a natural sweetener made from the same plant that they use to make tequila. It ranks low on the glycemic index, which means it does not raise blood sugar levels rapidly.

However, this may be due to the fact it is hard for the body to process because it is a form of fructose, chemically similar to high fructose corn syrup.

Though it contains some additional minerals, it is in too low quantities to make a significant difference.

Stevia

Stevia is a natural sweetener made from a South American plant that has been used for hundreds of years.

"Stevia is the healthiest low cal sweetener on the market, so that is what I recommend most," Macdonald pointed out.

However, recent research shows that stevia may not lower blood sugar levels and could negatively affect blood sugar control in diabetics.

iKnife: the smart weapon against cancer

Health. Metro watches one of the first demonstrations of a breakthrough technology

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

The surgery room fills with acrid smoke as the electronic knife sears lines into the patient. The smoke is captured and passes through a tube into a vending machine-sized gadget on wheels.

After a few moments of analysis it responds: "Green, 92 per cent healthy."

The patient in this case is low quality pork, as medical ethics would not allow a human subject for this live demonstration of the iKnife. The surgical "intelligent knife" represents a potentially transformative breakthrough in the battle against cancer.

"It can change the world," says Professor Jeremy Nicholson, Head of Surgery and Cancer at Imperial College London (ICL), where the device was developed.

Life-changing

"There would be more chance to operate on high-risk patients and shift the border between operable and inoperable."

Dr. Zoltan Takats
iKnife inventor and ICL surgeon

Using a process called Rapid Evaporative Ionization Mass Spectometry (REIMS), the iKnife tells surgeons in real-time whether the tissue they are cutting is cancerous. A trial of 91 patients recently concluded with 100 per cent accuracy, and detection is sensitive enough to detect tumours 1/1000th the size of a pinhead. While surgery is the leading treatment for the world's biggest killer, it relies on crude methods. Surgeons must cut away high volumes of healthy tissue as an error margin. Worse still, they often miss cancerous tissue that causes the disease to recur even more dangerously.

The new gadget would reduce those recurrences and open up new opportunities, its developers say.

"There would be more chance to operate on high-risk patients and shift the border between operable and inoperable," the iKnife inventor and ICL surgeon Dr Zoltan Takats told Metro.

The same technology could be used to identify other dangerous features such as blood disease or bacteria, and even to distinguish horsemeat from beef.

The iKnife is in its final trial and product design stages, following successful tests in Hungary, Germany and the UK, with one challenge to reduce a unit price of around $400,000. ICL expects it to enter regular use "within a few years."

There is nothing like a great dessert to end a perfect meal ... but, what happens in the summer?

Baking just isn't in the cards for many people.

Frozen desserts are your perfect solution and granita is way easier than ice cream.

The bonus is that you can use just about any fruit that may be a little too ripe to enjoy and impress guests.

Only you will know that all you needed was a metal cake pan and a fork.

The trick with granita is to make sure you're breaking up the ice as it freezes.

- 1 cup of simple syrup (Note: To make "simple syrup" boil 1 cup of water and 2 cups of sugar until dissolved. Let cool.)
- 1 cup of puréed fruit

1. In a blender, whiz together simple syrup and any ripe fruit.

2. Pour into a metal pan and freeze. Scrape crystals as they form every hour or two.

3. Serve in individual champagne or martini glasses as a treat, dessert or palate cleanser at a summer barbecue.

Dessert. Frozen Chocolate-Dipped Peanut Butter Banana Bites

1. Melt chocolate in top of double boiler or in microwave, then stir in peanut butter.

2. Place peanuts in a wide, shallow dish. Roll 3 to 4 pieces of banana in the melted chocolate and peanut butter mixture, and stir to coat.

3. Remove bananas using a fork and place in the dish containing peanuts. Roll chocolate-covered bananas in peanuts and coat as best as you can. Once well coated, place bananas on baking sheet lined with waxed paper.

4. Repeat with remaining bananas, re-melting the chocolate mixture if needed. Once complete, place in freezer.

5. Once frozen, store in freezer bag or airtight container. Thaw for 8 to 10 minutes before eating, to ensure banana bites are frozen, but not rock hard. NEWS CANADA/ PEANUTBUREAU.CA

Ingredients

- 4 oz (115 g) bittersweet or milk chocolate, chopped
- 1 tbsp (15 m) peanut butter
- 1 cup (250 ml) peanuts, finely chopped
- 2 large bananas, cut into 1 1/2-inch (4-cm) pieces

Buttermilk Cake: Where your sweet tooth meets the grill

Wow your guests with this impressive Grilled Peach Trifle With Lemon Buttermilk Cake.

1. Cake: Heat oven to 160 C (325 F). Butter 25-cm (10-inch) non-stick springform pan; line bottom with parchment paper.

3. Into bowl, sift flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt.

4. Reduce mixer speed to low. Slowly add flour mix to sugar mix, alternating with buttermilk, until well mixed. Add lemon zest and juice; mix well. Spread into prepared pan; smooth top.

5. Bake 40 mins. until tester inserted in centre comes out clean. Let cool in pan on rack 10 minutes. Carefully remove and let cool on rack completely.

Conundrum

You are going out to an important formal dinner at your boss's home. Your four-year-old child is home sick with a temperature and has a babysitter.

Is it reasonable for you to keep your cellphone on the dinner table to take any texts or calls that may come in from the babysitter, even if the babysitter is a mom herself who has babysat for you many times before?

Answer

It is never OK to leave your cellphone on the dinner table. Firstly if you are worried that your child is that sick, than perhaps it might be better to stay home and take care of him yourself.

Secondly, if you must go out and anticipate a call, first inform your hostess in private of the situation, secondly keep your cellphone on vibrate and in your pocket or lap. In the event that it does ring, excuse yourself from the table (don't explain why, just a simple "excuse me") and leave the dinning room before taking the call. If the situation is serious, then return to the dinning room and politely whisper into the hostess's ear that you must excuse yourself and return home at once.

Remember to send a note of apology the following day, and include how your child is doing.

Making a case to keep a cash stash

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

I love cash. When bad things happen — lost wallet, power outage and credit or debit card terminal woes — a secret cash stash rules.

Here's a case in point. My youngest daughter had a fraudulent charge on her credit card. She caught it and got a new card. However, she now appears to be on a high-risk watch list and any "odd" transaction triggers a block. On a recent trip to the U.S. her card was declined while trying to fill up her car to drive back to Canada.

Luckily, she occasionally listens to her mom and had an emergency $100 stashed in her car.

At home and everywhere you go some cash should be available. And I don't mean through ATM machines. They can run out of bills, break down or be felled by a power outage as happened during the recent floods in Alberta and Greater Toronto.

At home, I recommend singles have around $200 cash while families should aim for at least $100 per person. Yes, someone could break in and find the dough under your mattress. But the risk is small compared to the inconvenience of being stuck without money in an emergency.

Keep a few hundred dollars in cash at home. You never know when you'll need some money in an emergency. ISTOCK IMAGES

During holidays or business trips, you should have sufficient funds available for at least one night at a hotel plus meals. Sure, there are emergency replacement services available, but you can't always contact the credit card company and a couple of days might pass before the replacement arrives.

During Hurricane Sandy friends were forced to stay an extra three days in Virginia with no cellphone service and the single ATM at the local one-horse town was on the fritz. Fortunately, they had $500 cash and were comfortably able to wait out the storm. Kids also need to be made aware of the emergency cash. A note and receipt for any money used is a good plan. Granted, a stash can be tempting.

When my oldest daughter was in high school she cleaned out the teapot and bought pizza, movies and taxi rides for a bunch of friends. She paid it back, with interest, and never went near it again — except for real emergencies.

Bombers bruised, but not broken

Dealing with adversity. Coach, players looking for a way to turn around a disappointing start

Winnipeg Blue Bombers backup quarterback Justin Goltz is preparing to start Friday against the Calgary Stampeders in the event that starter Buck Pierce can't go.

But the Blue Bombers likely won't know the answer to that until Wednesday.

"I'm preparing as if I'm going to start, trying to build off the momentum of last week," Goltz said after practice Monday, when he took first-team reps and Pierce mostly stood around.

"You never know what the situation's going to be.... As long as I prepare as if I'm going to start, I can't go wrong."

Pierce was hit in the stomach in Friday's 35-19 loss to the Toronto Argonauts and couldn't finish the game.

Goltz, who played the second half and completed 13 of 15 throws for 170 yards, was in charge for Winnipeg's only touchdown of the game, a run by Chad Simpson late in the fourth quarter.

Winnipeg head coach Tim Burke says he isn't sure what Pierce's injury is — it could be just a bruise from the helmet hit to the abdomen — but, regardless, he isn't ready to go yet.

"It's not life-threatening," Burke said. "It's not internal organs that are bruised or anything like that."

The Blue Bombers took the short leash off Pierce against Toronto and let him move more, but Burke says he wasn't hurt on one of those plays. He was still in the pocket and someone just slipped a block.

"Actually, on the plays where we took him out wide, I don't think he got hit at all."

Keeping Pierce healthy was identified as a key to success this season by the Blue Bombers, although with a record of 1-3, success has been scarce so far.

Winnipeg has a fairly long list of wounded. Burke says he doesn't expect defensive tackle Bryant Turner back in time for Friday's game.

Tackling adversity

- Lineman J.T. Gilmore is also still a question mark and receiver Chris Matthews is doubtful, but another injured receiver, Kito Poblah, was looking better than expected in practice Monday.
- Burke sat the team down and told them they needed to work on handling adversity during a game like last week's loss.
- The players also held their own meeting and told each other what they think needs to be done to turn the season around.

Former NL MVP Braun suspended for PED use

Former National League MVP Ryan Braun was suspended without pay for the rest of the season and the post-season Monday in the first penalty of baseball's investigation of players reportedly tied to a Florida clinic accused of distributing performance-enhancing drugs.

Braun accepted the penalty.

"I am not perfect. I realize now that I have made some mistakes. I am willing to accept the consequences of those actions," he said in a statement.

Major League Baseball attempted to suspend Braun for a positive drug test following the 2011 season, but an arbitrator overturned the penalty because the Milwaukee star's urine sample was not handled as specified by baseball's drug agreement.

Jets waste Little time in re-signing top-line centre

It was a vote of confidence from both sides Monday as the Winnipeg Jets re-signed centre Bryan Little to a new five-year contract worth $23.5 million.

Little says he's convinced the team has the talent it needs to succeed and likes what the off-season addition of forwards Michael Frolik and Devon Setoguchi does to the offence.

"At the end of the day that's what we want," Little said of making the Jets into a playoff contender. "If I felt the team was going to struggle for five more years, I wouldn't have signed that deal." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Olympics. Speed a priority for 'Stevie Y' on larger Sochi ice surfaces

Sidney Crosby will try to lead Canada to a second straight Olympic gold next March in Sochi, Russia. GETTY IMAGES FILE

Sidney Crosby and Jonathan Toews lead a list of 47 players invited to a summer orientation camp for the Canadian men's Olympic hockey team.

The camp in Calgary runs from Aug. 25 to 28 and will begin the process of selecting the 25 players who will play for Canada at the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi, Russia.

Crosby and Toews are among 15 invitees who helped Canada win gold at the 2010 Games in Vancouver. The others are goalie Roberto Luongo, defencemen Dan Boyle, Drew Doughty, Duncan Keith, Brent Seabrook and Shea Weber, and forwards Patrice Bergeron, Corey Perry, Ryan Getzlaf, Rick Nash, Mike Richards, Eric Staal and Joe Thornton.

Pushing forward

"Some of these younger players are forcing their way into the lineup." Team Canada executive director Steve Yzerman. Newcomers on the orientation camp list include defencemen Alex Pietrangelo and P.K. Subban and forwards Steven Stamkos, John Tavares, Claude Giroux and Brad Marchand.

Team executive director Steve Yzerman said being mobile on the larger international ice surface in Sochi will be key.

"Ultimately, we'll pick the best players available to us, but playing on a bigger ice surface, I believe there is a priority on being able to skate," Yzerman said on a conference call. "That will weigh into our final decisions on putting this team together." THE CANADIAN PRESS

You have sacrificed a lot of late and no doubt feel you are entitled to something in return — and you're right. Decide what you want then reach out and take it.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The conditions you find yourself in are largely of your own making. If you want to change things, the effort must come from you. Loved ones will help but only if you ask.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The Sun's change of signs means you would like nothing better than to forget about serious things and have fun. So why don't you? Life is too short to waste even one day doing what you don't enjoy.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You have something important to deal with and although the Sun has moved out of your sign, Mars and Jupiter will give you all the energy and enthusiasm you need to sort it out.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
As the Sun begins its transit of your birth sign, you can afford to be more adventurous. By all means, weigh up the pros and cons but don't let fear or other people's disapproval hold you back. Go for it.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may have to put others' needs ahead of your own but if you stand back and see the bigger picture, you'll realize you are helping yourself as well. Everyone benefits.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
If you have made a mistake then admit it. It's really no big deal. Everyone does something silly once in a while, so make light of it and then move on.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The next few days will be productive, especially on the work front where you will find favour with important people. The most important thing is that you have a clear mental image of your long-term goal.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If someone has displeased you then you must let them know. You may be forgiving by nature but if you let them get away with it, they may think they can do it again.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Don't waste time on people who refuse to play by the rules. Either come down on them hard or cut them out altogether. It doesn't matter which approach you choose as long as you mean it.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
A dispute will disturb your peace of mind today and you must deal with it before it gets out of hand. This is a great time for affairs of the heart. Don't let anything spoil it.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you push yourself harder than usual today, you will get more done. But don't risk hurting yourself physically. Nothing is more important than your wellbeing, not even success. SALLY BROMPTON
